Anyone who doesn't think giving someone a book is a good gift should speak to employees of Wagoner Public Schools.

Recently, the school district received 2,000 books from Bruce Larkin, a children's author, and his company, Wilbooks.

"We're overwhelmed with the donation," Janet Dotson, principal of Ellington Elementary School said. "It comes at a time when we're watching every dollar being spent."

She said some teachers were so excited they danced when they saw the books.

"If you want to get a teacher excited, bring books," Dotson remarked. "It was like Christmas here in the reading lab."
